Dear Julia:

I thought perhaps that I should let you know about the outcome of the case involving your  friend.

Since I wrote you on 26 June, our personnel people have been looking into the possibilities of employment for him. As we told him, it is regretted that we have been unable at this time to take advantage of his services. At the present time, we are only hiring clerical and secretarial replacements as necessary, except on infrequent occasions when there is a specific need for a man with particular attainments in our field of work. However, we are going to keep his application on file, should an assignment become available at a later date.

Many thanks again for bringing his name to my attention, and I am sorry that our action at this time cannot be more favorable.

With my best wishes,

Affectionately,

1/4 Allen

Thank you for your letter of 22 June to Mr. Dulles expressing your interest in employment with the United States Government.

We note that you have just become eligible to apply for U. S. citizenship and must advise you that most of our positions require individuals who have been citizens for at least five years. However, there are occasionally other opportunities for us to employ people who do not meet this requirement and we shall be glad to consider your qualifications in light of our current openings in this category. Accordingly, we are bringing your letter to the attention of appropriate operating officials and shall advise you further when their review has been completed.

Your interest in service with our organization is appreciated.

Sincerely,

for H. D. Nichols

Dear Mr. Dulles

It is a great pleasure to have this opportunity to write you. Last summer, your cousin, Miss Julia Dulles, offered to write a letter of introduction pertaining to my prospective employment with the United States Government.

Having completed an application for citizenship, she suggested that I write to you supplying with a personal history.

I shall greatly appreciate your consideration and assistance.

Respectfully yours,

Dear Julia:

Thank you for your letter of June 8.

I shall look into the possibility of using your [redacted] friend. Unfortunately the fact that he is just becoming naturalized as an American citizen presents a good many difficulties under our rules and regulations. However, I shall see what we can do.

Dear Allen,

A young friend of mine married a fine young [] in 1957. [] is interested in a position in our government and I am writing to you and to Eleanor to ask if you can give him any advice and assistance.

I met him in 1958 at the home of his wife's parents and again last summer in his own home. Elsie and I were very favorably impressed with him.

I am writing to him suggesting that he write to you and Eleanor giving details that I do not know.

I have known his wife all her life. Virginia, her brother and sister, and parents are among my best friends. I lived next door to them []

I will appreciate anything you may do for []
